Who Is It For?

Every once in a while, you probably pillage your fridge for an unscheduled snack. You may search the contents of your ice box for a tasty morsel, but come away disappointed: "Nothing of interest here. Same old stuff from the last time I looked." But all of the sudden, you see it! Your favorite dessert! "Where did this come from?!" you ponder with excitement. "I must have a slice!" And as you get ready to devour the delectable dessert, you are interrupted by a strong and forbidding voice: "That's not for you! Put it away!" All of us have experienced the cruel disappointment of learning that a snack or dessert is not for us. At one time or another, we all have mistaken whether something was intended for us. And so, Christians, from time to time, have been accused of misunderstanding who the Bible is intended for. It is occasionally argued that the Bible, and specifically its teaching and commands, were only intended for its original audience and not for people some 2,000 years after its composition. But is this true? Was the Bible designed only for its first audience? Or was the Bible and its teachings originally intended for all people to read and apply generations after its original recipients?

While the Bible contains many portions that are directly addressed to a specific audience, we can also see that the Bible was composed with the whole world in mind. Not only because it explains the origin of the world (Gen. 1-2), but also because it shows that the Jewish nation was established for the purpose of being a blessing to all the families (Gen. 12:3; 28:14) and nations of the earth (Gen. 22:18; 26:4). The Bible also reveals that God's salvation was to be made known to all nations and all people are exhorted to turn to God and praise Him (Ps. 67:2-4; 117:1). The Bible also declares that the gospel is for all nations (Mk.16:15). So whether you consider the Old Testament or New Testament, the Bible describes itself as having all people in mind, and as calling out to all people.

The other important thing to examine is whether or not the Bible (especially the New Covenant for all people), was designed to be applied and used indefinitely into the future. The Bible declares that the opportunity to respond to the gospel is for all who are far off (Acts 2:38-39). We also see multiple examples where the New Testament declares that it is for future readers (Mk. 13:14, 37; Rev. 1:3; 22:7). Although there is more evidence, I think Eph. 3:21 will suffice to demonstrate that the Bible views itself as being applicable to all future generations: "...to Him be the glory in the church and in Christ Jesus to all generations forever and ever. Amen." The Bible declares that it is for all people and is written to all generations. So let us strive to declare this and live accordingly.

Thank You
Deerfoot Church of Christ,
Thanks for all the cards, food, and prayers offered on behalf of my wife Bev Key at her passing on April 28, 2025.
I want to give special thanks to Rick Glass as he traveled every step of Bev’s path the last year. A special thanks to Steve & Patricia Putnam who also gave without ceasing.
Butch Key and family

Dear Church Family,
Thank you for all the love shown during the passing of Jeff, loving father, son, brother and friend. We would like to thank Richard for the beautiful service, the Elders for the meat tray, the Bread and Blessings for the sandwiches, chips and desserts. Also, to the church family for the food prepared and served after the funeral, and all the cards, calls and prayers during this difficult time. It means so much to have a loving Church family.
In Christian Love,
The Glenn and Couch families
